

2018-19 REQUEST FOR REVIEW OF DEPENDENCY STATUS

Dependency status for financial aid is established by the U.S. Department of Education. Federal regulations require a student's family to take primary responsibility for providing for educational costs. Financial aid eligibility is determined by using both the student and parent financial information for students who are considered dependent according to the federal government. Dependent students are required to provide parental information. Occasionally, due to extraordinary circumstances, students cannot obtain the parental information required. If this is your situation, you have the option to appeal this federal regulation by providing the following information as requested.

The following are not considered unusual or extenuating circumstances:

- You do not live in your parents' home
- You are self-supporting
- You are not claimed as a federal income tax exemption on your parents' income tax return
- Your parents cannot afford or refuse to help with college or living expenses
- Your parents are unwilling to provide their financial information to complete the FAFSA

- Two detailed, signed statements from third parties who have knowledge of your circumstances and can verify your statement. The third parties' statements must be on official letterhead if applicable and must include contact information such as phone number and/or email address as well as explanation of their relationship to you. Acceptable third parties include teachers, counselors, medical authorities, clergy, prison administrators, government agencies, or court representatives.

Appeals submitted without the required documentation listed above cannot be considered. If you are approved for a dependency appeal, your dependency status must be reevaluated each year until you meet the federal criteria for being considered an independent student automatically.
